London, United Kingdom, 28 July – The International Corporate Governance Network (ICGN), with Members responsible for assets under management in excess of US$59 trillion, announced shortlists today for the ICGN Global Stewardship Disclosure Awards.

Investor stewardship contributes to sustainable and responsible value creation which benefits companies, investors and society as a whole. The ICGN Global Stewardship Awards celebrate leadership and innovation in stewardship related disclosures by showcasing the best in class amongst the global investor community, particularly in relation to policies guiding company engagement, conflicts of interest and voting. Award categories are defined by asset owner and asset manager and are tiered by the size of assets under management.

In announcing the awards, Chair of ICGN’s Awards Committee, Phil Armstrong, said: “Our congratulations go to this year’s shortlisted asset owners and asset managers for their global leadership in stewardship disclosures. What was particularly gratifying was the diversity of candidates considered for these awards indicating the growing significance of stewardship disclosure as integral to investment management not just in the UK, Europe and North America but in other important financial markets. It was also reassuring to observe the increasing quality and standards of disclosure, not only in form but through practical examples of engagement and application of stewardship and the accountability for investors’ funds. Disclosure is fundamental to the credibility of stewardship and those shortlisted have provided exemplary standards of reporting on their stewardship activities in this year’s awards.”
